AN UNFINISHED BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feminism thrives on campus. In response to the Women's Liberation Movement, tens of thousands of women and men meet in thousands of courses on hundreds of campuses across the U.S., dedicated to the creation of new knowledge about women, men and human life. The task of Women's Studies, this academic arm of Women's Liberation, is to stimulate revision of traditional, male-biased canons in all fields of scholarship. Faculty and students, on campus and in the community, seek new answers to old questions and discover whole areas of inquiry unacknowledged by previous generations of scholars. Inspiring innovation in traditional disciplines and breaking bonds between conventional categories of knowledge, Women's Studies is revitalizing academic life in the 1970's.

The practice of Women's Studies requires delving into new sources and reconstructing methods of teaching and learning. Women's Studies Programs therefore have become resource centers for the community. To help answer the innumerable inquiries we receive from colleagues in the struggle against sexism, the Women's Studies Program at San Diego State University has prepared this guide. Amid the burgeoning of women's studies, it can only be offered as "An Unfinished Bibliography." The choice of categories reflects the multi- and cross-disciplinary approaches favored by many in women's studies.

While the preparation of the bibliography was a shared concern, with many persons contributing suggestions and titles, the major burden of research and compilation was carried by a women's studies student, Linda Cinquemani. We wish to thank her and all who contributed.

Because of the pressure of time, we have not been able to complete the usual editorial work, and apologize for omissions, inconsistencies, and misspellings. We hope that, nevertheless, this work facilitates curricular change and contributes toward the elimination of sexism in education.
